Price Agreed For 1948-49 Crop

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King interrupted a cabinet meeting here today to announce that $2 a bushel has been agreed upon as the price for Canadian wheat to the United Kingdom for the 1948-49 crop, compared with the present price of $1.55.

Under a contract signed last year, Canada agreed to ship Britain 600,000 bushels of wheat in four years: $1.55; 140,000 bushels in 1948-49 at $1.25 minimum and 140,000 bushels in 1949-50 at a minimum of $1.

However, maximum prices for the last two years were to be settled by negotiation in the face of existing world conditions.

Talks on the 1948-49 crop started recently while Agriculture Minister Gardiner was in Europe attending the food and agriculture conference in Geneva. He had discussions with Food Minister Strachey and after returning home the negotiations were continued by cable.

The negotiations ended with the last two days and both London and Ottawa announced today that the $2 price had been reached.

Discussions on the maximum price for the 1948-49 crop—last of the 600,000-bushel contract—likely will be closed next year.

THE 12 A. B. 1948-49 crop will come into effect Aug. 1, 1948, after compared with the current world price in Chicago of around $2.80.

The Canadian Wheat Board, sole purchasing agency of wheat in Canada, jacked up the initial price for the farmers in the United Kingdom to $1.55. Any profits the wheat board makes on wheat transactions are returnable to the farmers through participating certificates.

While the board supplies the British and domestic market with $1.55 wheat, its sales to foreign

Young Girl Sole Witness to Crime

A double murder and suicide, allegedly committed by a man stabbed by his wife killed the lives of three residents of the Lloydminster district on Tuesday night, according to RCMP.

The two murder victims were Mrs. Nellie Towpich and 15-year-old Shirley Brown. Alleged by police to have committed the murders and then taken his own life was William Towpich, husband of the dead woman.

Horror-struck, tense and trembling, a 10-year-old girl who a few short hours before had witnessed the death of the two persons, who included her mother and father, sat in a Lloydminster office Wednesday and told the story of the killings to an RCMP official. The girl was Rose Towpich.

INITIAL REPORTS received in Edmonton Wednesday, by RCMP were confirmed, and it was first alleged by police that the deceased were Mr. and Mrs. Brown and a Mr. Towpich. This morning, with an official report from the RCMP at Lloydminster.

Tito Tells Veterans Prepare for War

BELGRADE, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Premier Marshal Tito urged Yugoslav veterans in a speech yesterday "to be prepared at all times, to be ready to take up arms and fight."

"We are working as if there will be war in 10 or 20 years," he said, "and we must be prepared ourselves as if there will be."

Tito told the men he had thought under him in the past several years of the occupation.

"When I say that we must be prepared, this does not mean that war will start tomorrow. This only means that it is a good thing to be prepared to do this in the event of war will be removed."

"Impression is like a hyena and it is very difficult to get away from it cheaply and make the most profit out of it."

Only the Best, Good Enough

The public will welcome the announcement that an inspection of mental institutions in this province is to be made, by Dr. Hinks, director of the national committee for mental hygiene. For the reason that such institutions are places for the protective confinement of persons who are not capable of living in the normal way and managing their own affairs. And the further reason that the idea of providing an "asylum" for persons so afflicted is now associated with the idea of trying to cure the malady from which they suffer and of restoring them to freedom and responsibility.

With such an object in view, only the best of treatment and environment is good enough. The human mind remains the most mysterious thing in the world. But its nature and operations are being studied more intensively than they ever were before. The results of this research must be applied in the arrangements and conduct of mental hospitals if the utmost is to be done on behalf of those who need their care. Such institutions therefore require inspection by specialists, not on an occasional visit, but frequently, and not merely for the purpose of detecting faults but for the positive purpose of directing improvement.

In Alberta these hospitals have grown in recent years until they provide accommodation for numbers of patients beyond former expectation. That is because the conduct of mental institutions has been found to be possible in a high percentage of cases. The work they are doing is the only argument needed that the hospitals should be given full and continuous advantage of the findings of mental research.

How to Raise Wages

Wages are paid out of the product of the labor by which the wages are earned. There is no other source from which they can come. It is true that in some circumstances as, for example, an employer pays wages from capital, but that can only be done temporarily for it ends in bankruptcy—which means no more employment and no wages. The exception proves the rule, proves it "the hard way" for both employer and employee.

It follows that increased wages can only come from increased productivity, that the increase is to be real. The proof of that is to be seen in the industrial record of the last two years. Many classes of people in Canada are now getting more dollars per week than they received two years ago. But they complain, almost without exception, that they are not better off.

They are no better off because prices have also gone up. Prices have gone up because production did not go up enough to keep them down, and thus make the extra number of dollars a gain in real wages. It is possible to have a situation in which money-wages rise but the standard of living does not rise, or even sink to a lower level. Over a large sector of the industrial world that situation now exists.

People do not spend their lives for money. They work for the things money will buy. Unless by their collective labor they make more of these things available, they gain nothing in real rewards for their time and energy. Pushing money-wages higher here and there across the board, or all the way across the board, will not make the time better. Nothing can do that but to step-up the production of things which people must have to live.

In a desert a man could starve to death even with a pocketful of money. The trouble at present is that Canada, and the world in general, is not far enough removed from the desert-condition of scarcity.

Self-Governing Into War?

A month after the new dominions of India and Pakistan came into existence they appealed to Britain to intervene and stop the war between them. This decision to appeal to the empire—which both were formerly so anxious to get rid of—seems to be one important point on which the governments of the two have agreed since they undertook to rule the country.

That the situation is grave is only too apparent. Even Gandhi has stopped muttering dreams of racial harmony and inter-dominion friendship. He says a formal declaration of war may be looked for if Pakistan does not protect the Hindus within its borders. To which the Pakistan authorities say Moslems in the Hindu dominion are as badly in need of defence against mobism.

Both sides are thus contemplating the possibility—if not the probability—of full-out and regularized conflict. And both are counting their dead in hundreds of thousands.

What Britain will do anything more than attempt to mediate is impossible. The troops are being withdrawn, under a pledge that they will be withdrawn completely. India and Pakistan are thus in prospect of having to arrange a settlement between themselves, with what assistance friendly advice can give in modifying tempers and suggesting mutual measures of restraint.

London in turn, at the insistence of the Pakistan premier, has informed the governments of the other dominions of the position and of the request that it try to bring about a working agreement. Those dominions will of course function purely in an advisory capacity, perhaps to the point of offering to take a hand in joint-arbitration. Canada and Australia and the others will not send any troops to India to enforce order.

These dominions have no responsibility for the situation in India. Having attained independence, the new self-governing states will have to work out their own political salvation, with such help as they can give them in the way of suggesting compromise and urging them to cultivate the racial tolerance of which they seem at present to have little or no conception.

It Is His Move

It seems to be the hope of Britain, France and China that Russia can be persuaded to stop moving towards the point of offering to take a hand in joint-arbitration. Canada and the others will not send any troops to India to enforce order.

This is pretty plainly disclosed in the speech of Mr. Hector McNeill, chief British delegate to the General Assembly of the United Nations. It was implied also in the U.S. demand for the veto power, restricted and a watch-dog committee created. The suggestion is that they felt this overhaul of the set-up to be unnecessary.

It is unnecessary, if Moscow will let the Council act wherever there is need that it take a hand in stopping an outside country meddling with the explosive situation, such as that in the Balkans. The other powers has misused the veto, but Russia has never hesitated to employ it when one of its satellite states needed to be called to account. If Russia would refrain from blocking Council action as the other great powers have, refrained, there would be no need to curtail the veto power or to create a watching committee.

The initiative therefore rests with Mr. Vishinsky. If he gives assurance that the Council will be allowed to function freely in the Soviet orbit as it does elsewhere, the machinery for radical changes in the executive machinery will be made superfluous. It is up to him.

Parley Hears Warning Game Conservation Urgent Tourist Need

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—(CP)—Dominion and provincial tourist officials yesterday talked over Canada's vast and growing tourist industry—one which, repeated close to $175,000,000 last year—and mapped new plans and urged a warning that unless there was a wild life conservation program "we won't be in the tourist business 10 or 15 years from now."

The warning came from Leo Doland, director of the Canadian Travel Bureau, as he spoke to the tourist conservation committee of conservation after it was advocated by a number of the delegates. Dr. J. J. McCann, acting minister of trade and commerce, said that to develop Canada's tourist business "we want a lot better, sleeping places, hotels and restaurants." Canada must sell something more than scenery if she expected tourists—especially United States tourists—to come back year after year.

Provincial representatives from every province took part in round-table discussions with representatives of transportation services. They agreed that tourists should not be exploited for their dollars and appointed a special steering committee to co-ordinate tourist bureau activity across the country.

HON. A. J. HOOKE, Alberta minister of economic affairs, said that Canada had to educate her own people in the reception of tourists. Too much emphasis was being put on the "tourist dollar," he said. Canada had to make friends of her tourist guests and make sure they returned year after year. Ontario led all provinces in tourist advertising, said P. C. McTier, deputy minister of travel for the province. Last year the central province's budget was $235,000 and one-third of this was spent in promotion.

An "austerity program" to limit the cash of dollars per person and the bag of hunting specimens is necessary if Canada's wild life is to be conserved properly, Minister representative J. S. Macdonald told the morning session.

Pointing out that game flocks have been the chief support of a large Indian population around James Bay for centuries, R. A. Gibson of the federal dept. of Indian and northern affairs, urged hunters should exercise restraint.

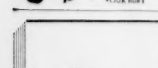

"Hello" To Exercise—Goodbye To Pounds

Are you one of those women who has difficulty buying a dress? The waistline is perfect but oh how it pulls across the hip section! Most abnormally inclined women have firm, slender hips because they use them continually. Modern, tennis, horseback riding, dancing, all help to keep the hips thin and ward off fatty pads. But not all of us have time for active outdoor sports so we have to rely on home exercise for keeping in shape.

For a good hip-slimmer, sit on the floor, legs straight, hands on the floor behind the hips. Pull knees up to chest, raising feet a few inches from the floor. Swing knees from side to side, beginning to the right and touching knees to the floor on the right side, then swinging knees across and touching them to the left side. Repeat eight times and then ten. Sixteen times altogether. There are other helpful thigh exercises in our leader Service booklet No. 90 along with ways to reduce legs, shoulders, arms, bust. Posture training, constipation, too.

Send 35c (cash) for "Beauty and Health Through Simple Exercises" to The Edmonton Builder, Reader Service or 60 Front St. West, Toronto. Print name, address with zone, booklet title and No. 90.

all concerned, "friend and foe alike." General Ernest "Ernie" Sansom for the Progressive Conservatives, Brigadier (Doctor) Milton Gregg for the Liberals and Murray Young for the CCF are so busy with the hand-shaking of house-to-house and farm-to-farm calls, they have little time for speeches.

The lead on the platform for each of the candidates is being varied by local party supporters, and the newspaper and radio interviews are being done by the "ghosts."

"DR. GREGG possesses such a 'personality,'" confided Mr. Lawrence Jones of the "Creative of Section" of Editorial Enterprises "Toronto, assigned to write his platform and radio speeches and prepare the newspaper advertising for him, that he would be wasted if we didn't keep him busy for his best work on the individual voter."

"Ernie Sansom," explained Richardson, "is tremendously popular we feel he can do his best work in personally canvassing his thousands of constituents."

Murray Young, contended his board of youthful handlers from the University of Toronto, "is so dynamic and has so much personal magnetism it would be a waste for him to work in the door-to-door canvassing of his constituents."

WHILE "ERNE" Sansom has hit a peak of 65 calls a day and Dr. Gregg has clocked a top of 60, Murray Young does not make 10. A Socialist, said the young (24) Mr. Young usually spends an hour on one call, talking CCF "shop" in an effort to convert the unbelievers.

With the candidates busy as gophers in the grass-roots of York-Sunbury, the "outside" press industriously are going about the same practical campaign assignments, devising much of their energies to the problem of getting publicity into the indifferent and even recalcitrant Frederickton Gleazer.

For the Liberals' Mr. Jones, life with the Gleazer has not been too difficult. Since Premier McNair is related to Publishers Alexander and Wallace Crockett. And the Gleazer, Mr. McNair's influence more than matches that of Prime Minister King in Ottawa. It goes more into the small details.

THE GOOD OFFICES of the personable Mr. McNair may be used by the deserving to secure a room with bath at the crowded Queen Hotel, when all else fails.

For the Progressive Conservatives, the problem of space is still the Gleazer is a little more difficult, though by no means impossible. Because the requirements of Frederickton merchants, naturally, are closer to the heart of the Gleazer's 35-year-old advertising manager than are the needs of the politicians, all parties are finding space more precious than gold.

When the aged but agile advertising manager has said "no" to the cash sale of space—still disposed at rates unchanged since 1920—the Progressive Conservatives have found the printers more amenable to reason.

Subject to the proper form of freedom, the printers will find space in the crowded columns, and probably nobody is more surprised than the advertising manager when The Gleazer hits the streets late in the afternoon.

THE GLEAZER has not been sending either of its two middle-

Queen Mother Welcomed With Boogie Woogie

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(CP)—To the raucous band of boogie woogie from neighboring loud-speakers, 30-year-old Queen Mary marched into Britain's first post-war radio exhibition at the Olympia yesterday and left to right as she entered the dazzling display of 20th-century hi-fi.

Then as the music changed to a dreamy Edwardian waltz, she left Oliver Lottwell, president of the Radio Industry Council, and a group of black-coated officials on an extensive tour, pausing every few yards to examine new types of apparatus and ask searching questions.

Her eyes quickly fastened on new nursery telephone equipment enabling a baby's cries to be heard some 200 feet in the kitchen, living room and bathroom, or if parents are out, by neighbors wired for reception.

"Very ingenious," commented the Queen Mother as she paused on a display of radio equipment for schools.

aid reporters to cover campaign meetings.

"If the political parties were their stuff to run," says City Editor Anne Mathews quite frankly, "they can bring it in and out. But they had better keep the stories short."

So dutifully, and not without gratitude, the publicity men of every morning trumpet up the old wooden boxes to the Gleazer's second floor editorial offices, and write with appropriate headings, from new tickets on the political news of the previous day.

THE STUFF goes into print the way the publicity men write it, which only as it should be since they tell their own copy.

The Gleazer's two reporters, both regarded as a wage like the sugar, are the only ones who are not meetings might warrant their attention.

"Our boys manage very well to restrain their enthusiasm," smiled City Editor Mathews.

All City Editors should be cast from the same mold, for Anne Mathews has been with The Gleazer 46 years.

Having seen more than her share of elections, she isn't getting too excited about this one.

The Gleazer is the only newspaper, daily or weekly, published in all of York and Sunbury counties, so the best party publicists must conform to its unique ways.

Editorials are "written" with sections from The New York Sun by the telegraph editor, and deal with an amazing variety of subjects, but never the current campaign.

THERE MAY be a declaration of policy from The Gleazer before election day. Managing Editor Wallace Crockett hinted.

He wouldn't say which way the paper might swing its influence, but indications are the endorsement will go to the Liberals.

Business Manager Alexander Crockett, who rushes down to the mailing room to wrap papers each day the press roll, believed The Gleazer would remain "independent," but "neutral" until the last ballot box is judged.

"People don't have to think for themselves," said he, "and they don't need an editor to tell them how to vote."

He believes even now he knows the vote trend.

"I'm ready to bet a wad."

THERE BEING no independent available to match his, no bets were made and he kept his choice to himself.

If finally Mr. Crockett's big word comes down on the October 20 election, this reporter will feel secure in wagering a much smaller bet that it will be laid on Miller Greg.

Roving Edmontonian Digs Up Series' Gems

Harry Ornest, well known Edmonton senior ball player, had a great box view of yesterday's World Series opener between Brooklyn Dodgers and Yankees played before the record-breaking crowd in Yankee Stadium. Asked to write his impressions for readers of THE EDMONTON BULLETIN, Ornest only obligingly complied, but sent along a bang-up story. — Sports Editor.

By Harry Ornest

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Bill Terry, former manager of the New York Giants and once one of the greatest ball players of all time, was sitting beside me in the press box. Terry summed up the opening game of the 1947 classic by saying, "The Yanks got more runs than hits and did it the way they always do—it in one big inning—I've seen many better hitting series ball games."

Press-Box View

And that was just about it. After Dixie Walker bloomed a single into short left off the handle of his bat to drive in the first run of the contest in the opening inning, the Dodgers exploded for five runs in the bottom of the fifth. That was Ralph Branca and Yul Berman, and Hugh Casey did the mopping up.

YANKS STARTER, Frank Shea, also did his exit in the fifth when Harris sent in Golden Boy Bobby Brown to pitch. But the big blow of the New York uprising were Johnny Lindell's cannon shot into the left field foul line with the bases loaded, and Tom Henrich's towering slam home to drive home what proved the deciding tally. Although lefty Joe Page did allow two runs, the American League champs were never really serious contenders after the fifth.

Offensively Lindell's double, Henrich's clutch single and the base-running antics of Jackie Robinson were the highlights. The colored first baseman of the Dodgers showed he was every bit as good as the white players in regard to his terrific speed and aggressiveness. After walking in the first inning, he stole second easily despite the fact it appeared the Yankees would never then let him be going down. That set up the first Brooklyn run.

Then the third inning Robinson upset Shea so much with his disappearing lead that the Yankees committed a foul ball chasing Robinson back three times—and he was never out of the game.

Defensively the highlights were provided by Carl Furillo and Dewey Brown. Furillo, who had been running catch of Dimaggio's tremendous fly ball in the eighth inning, the former Dodger outfielder made the catch in left center, just from out of left-center, the bottom of the bleachers. The other defensive game was also Dimaggio, but he was the Yankee culprit who was credited with a base hit after Reese had gone for his right to throw a sparkling one-handed stab. That was the end of the big inning.

Apart from the ball game there was plenty to be a young fellow named Pete Reiser, who was caught out. He was a third baseman for the Brooklyn Dodgers and was caught out. He was a third baseman for the Brooklyn Dodgers and was caught out. He was a third baseman for the Brooklyn Dodgers and was caught out.

[Swindler Once Passed As Woman]

$34,000 Fraud Charge Ends As Easterner Convicted

BRIDGEWATER, N.J. (UPI)—A lawyer who told a federal grand jury that a woman who was marauded by a man who was "frankly" another man, was convicted yesterday of a $34,000 fraud charge.

SANFORD ROSS, 40, whose home now is in the tiny Elgin, Va., County community, called the woman "my wife."

After charging him with "Grand Jury" who more than 11 years ago was charged with a lifetime share of a $60,000 legacy and of how "she" had marauded for years as a man.

In July the last time, he was examined and the doctor announced, "my wife was a woman."

"I was back in the States," says Thomas, "but, certainly, he's claiming to be my ally in a business deal."
 Ross, who is, in every sense, a "big name" in the fashion world, says he has never heard of the man who has the money to buy the deal.
 "I think we have found the biggest fish in the pond," says Thomas.

The illustration shows a woman's head and shoulders, wearing a large, ornate hat with a veil and a necklace. Below her is a circular object, possibly a coin or a small mirror.
